The restrictions imposed by the pandemic, starting in spring 2020, have opened up the need and the desire to increase the opportunities for mutual involvement, through the ways that technology now offers.

Sport magazines have organised a webinar programme which, by involving the readers themselves, have met with growing success, so much so that it has become necessary to organise additional meetings not initially planned. Information becomes training because of the ability of our guests to share their experiences with their colleagues.

The city of Turin has been chosen for 2021 and for the next five years as the venue for the tennis tournament in which top players participate. This year's tournament took place from 14 to 21 November and was held in the former ICE Palace designed for the 2006 Winter Olympics, now known as PalaAlpitour. For the occasion, the venues had to undergo adaptation, the design of which was entrusted to two tenders. Remarkable are the main tennis court, the training and warm-up court and the practice court, in line with the monuments in the square.

Inaugurated in 1919, Cremona's Stadio Zini is one of the historic venues of Italian football. Its restyling shows how the comfort needs of contemporary sport can be combined with a structure that is only apparently rigid and unchanging, in particular by making better use of the external and internal square footage and having an important focus on inclusion, with areas, services and path adapted for people with disabilities. The interventions have been accompanied by the preservation and conservation of the elements of the building's historical architectural value.

The building has two entrances: one for the pool area and one for the physiotherapy center.

The architectural design seeks a balance between forms and materials with the aim of giving the citizens a light building, which invites entry and that already from the outside you can guess the activity carried out indoors.
